Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: .from its position, cause a motor action on the lagging machine (b), and a corresponding generator action on the leading machines connected to the bus bars; and it thus tends to draw the machines into synchronism (Sect. 86), for it will be noticed by reference to the figure that u is in phase with m and in opposition to u, and that m and n are respectively the components of a and b, which are in opposition, and therefore working on the parallel circuit. If the machine, b, led the bus bar curve, then the synchronizing current would retard instead of assisting it, as the figure plainly shows. The effect of the synchronizing current in dragging the machines into step depends upon its magnitude and relative phase, while its magnitude depends: (i) upon the algebraic sum, or, what is the same thing, the arithmetical difference between...
