O'Brien was only 15 when Caesar was published, but he already possessed an instinct for deft plotting and uncomplicated narrative. The New York Times A stark tale encompassing the cruelty and beauty of the natural world, and a clear demonstration of the storytelling gift that would later flower in the Aubrey-Maturin series. When he was fourteen years old and beset by chronic ill health, Patrick O'Brien began creating his first fictional character. I did it in my bedroom, and a little when I should have been doing my homework, he confessed in a note on the original dust-jacket. Caesar tells the picaresque, enchanting, and quite bloodthirsty story of a creature whose father is a giant panda and whose mother is a snow leopard. Through the eyes and voice of this fabulous creature, we learn of his life as a cub, his first hunting exploits, his first encounters with man, his capture and taming. Caesar was published in 1930, three months after O'Brien's fifteenth birthday, but the dry wit and unsentimental precision O'Brien readers savor in the Aubrey-Maturin series is already in evidence. The...

Reviews

This publication may be really worth a go through, and a lot better than other. It really is written in simple terms and never difficult to understand. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
