You know what has made the change in you--even the mighty power of God; you know that, if God had not come to seek you, you would still have been living in sin. I hope you look to the rock whence you were hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence you were digged. (Isa. li. 1.) I hope you go softly because of your past sins--that you are humbled when you think of them. I hope you keep your heart with all diligence, and flee daily from the sin that doth so easily beset you. When Manaen went with Paul and Barnabas, he must often have thought of the days when he sat at Herod s table--and so must you often think of your former ways in the haunts of sin. Reader, don t you think that Manaen often prayed for Herod? He may often have helped Herod to sin, and led him on in the way of temptation--and now he felt doubly bound to pray for him. And have you such thoughts within you? Do you remember your old friends and companions? They may have led you into sin--or you may have led them, --do you pray for them? Manaen, I dare say, was not contented with praying for Herod--he must have talked to him--he must have entreated him to believe in Jesus--to break off his sins by righteousness--and, through grace, to be a new creature. Christian Reader,...
