This engraving, and explanatory key, are published to meet a want long felt by strangers visiting the monument, and who are unacquainted with the localities in the neighborhood. It is hoped, however, from the very careful and faithful manner in which the work has been accomplished, that it will meet a welcome reception from the residents of the cities and towns included in the landscape. The city of Boston, and its relation to the surrounding country, is very favorably presented to the eye from this point of view. At one glance is seen all the railroads - seven in number - and every other avenue connecting Boston with the country - excepting, only, the two bridges from South Boston, and Washington street, over the neck. The position of these last named places, however, cannot fail to be understood. The commerce and trade of Boston are increasing with an unparalleled rapidity - mainly attributable to her railroads. There are now - May, 1848 - two hundred and twenty-eight trains of cars passing over the railroads in Boston every day. In 1845, these roads carried two millions two hundred and fifty-four thousand six hundred and eighty passengers to and from Boston. Last year - 1847 - these same roads carried four millions seventy-five thousand six hundred and ninety-eight passengers,...
