Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Natural and Artificial Incubation and Brooding This bulletin has been prepared with the idea of helping, if possible, those already in the poultry business, both large and small breeders, who have, perhaps, experienced some difficulty in the hatching or brooding branch of their work, and those without experience who intend starting in this branch of agriculture. The Essential of Successful Incubation. The most common cause of poor results or failure in incubation is the use of eggs of low vitality. Successful incubation begins long before the eggs are laid. The eggs must be from stock of high vitality that have never been forced; that are fed all the green food they will eat, and some form of animal food as well as grain. While fowls will sometimes lay a goodly number of eggs upon a grain diet, yet the eggs are oftentimes lacking in those food elements that the embryo requires, and they often hatch poorly, and those chicks that do hatch will be of impaired vitality, very difficult to raise. The vitality of the...
